Learn How to Turn Tragedies into Triumphs with New Xulon Title

Readers will gain comfort and determination to face the future with faith

LONGWOOD, FL—Everyone will face trials in their lives. Everyone will experience trouble—both physical and spiritual—and the reality of the pain will seem more than they can bear. It is not about what happens in a person’s life that measures who they are, but how they respond to what happens. In Xulon Press author Dale Peterson’s new title, Leave a Well in the Valley: Turn Your Tragedies into Triumphs ($18.99, paperback, 978-1-61579-909-1), readers will receive the comfort and assurance needed to face serious life problems from one who has faced similar fears and foes.

“Readers can glean from my personal experience therapeutic hope and renewed determination to face the future with faith that God will lead them beyond their valleys and energize them to dig a well in the valley through which they pass,” the author says. “These pages offer principles that encourage and inspire weary travelers as they plod through the tough times of life. Insight and hope awaits each reader.”

In a world full of rampant doubt, discouragement, depression, divorce, and death, it is refreshing to discover an author who deals with these timeless topics that life throws at people, and does so from personal, victorious experience. Through his personal tragedies and trials, Peterson emerges with a story that breathes fresh hope into the hearts of all who read and identify with these and similar struggles.
